THE INSIDE SCOOP ON FOOD IN LOS ANGELES

Small Bites: Foxtail closes, Capitol City Sports Grill opening soon, Pig 'n Whistle coming downtown

August 21, 2009 | 6:46 am

After almost a monthlong delay, Capitol City Sports Grill expects to officially open its doors on or around Labor Day weekend. Walk-throughs are being offered and the menu of upscale bar food, written by chef Shad Davis (Belmont, Stone Fire Pizza) is close to being released. The space, which was formerly Goa, features huge sliding glass doors that will create an indoor-outdoor effect. It also boasts an astounding 40 plasma TV screens, all of which are over 60 inches. The largest HD screen is in the main bar -- it's 14 by 8 feet. Apparently this won't add up to sonic chaos because the place features five "studio zones" where you will hear only your game. If that's not enough, you can request wireless speakers to use at your table. Completing the ultimate sports fanatic scene: 30 beers on tap and an additional 30 to 40 in bottles. Touchdown! Capitol City Sports Grill, 1615 N. Cahuenga Blvd., L.A.
